I have not read Tom's attachment, but it seems we will be having a workshop on this issue, so there will be an opportunity to continue discussion.

A one-line acknowledgement seems fine for now; we should not feel obliged to say more at the moment.

But, then we will want to consider whether there is a benefit or not to further discussions prior to a discussion in a workshop. We may decide we DO want to go back and forth some more prior to a workshop.

David

I was going to send a one-line note back acknowledging receipt of this email. I don't have time to start another discussion with Tom so I am not providing any further comments on what he has sent. Thought I would check with you before I did so.

Ravi:

The attached word doc file contains my responses to your original analysis of rat tumor incidence vs. DNA adducts as well as some discussion points that have come up since then at our various meetings. Please confirm receipt and your ability to open and read the file via return email, and let me know if you have any questions.

I look forward to further discussions with you and others at EPA in dealing with this important set of scientific issues.

Best regards,
Tom Starr
